Are you intimidated by classroom videoconferencing or unsure of what opportunities it might open up for you and your students?

Have you learned about the Learning Network of Vermont (LNV) before but feel a little rusty?

If you answered “yes” to either of these questions, please join us at one of these sessions for an introductory workshop on classroom videoconferencing using the LNV.

During this workshop, participants will:

- Understand the basic uses of the LNV in classrooms and envision the collaborative possibilities that videoconferencing can bring to the classroom.
- See examples of how videoconferencing is being used in Vermont classrooms.
- Understand parts of the LNV system and be able to perform basic functions.

Follow-up meetings for more in-depth LNV training will be offered.

This workshop is free, but please register at:
