An Act Relating to Agricultural, Forestry, and Horticultural Education; Animal Dissection; the Repeal of Burdensome Reports; Streamlining the Formation of Union Districts; Districts that Pay Tuition for All Students; and Other Changes to Education Law: Designation of a Public or Elementary School as the Public School of a District; Study

Report/Recommendations to the House and Senate Committees on Education

The Legislature has asked the department to provide information to the General Assembly that will allow it to determine whether expanded school designation should be available to all schools. “Designation of an independent high school as the public high school of a school district” was added to 16 VSA § 827 in 1970 as part of Act 298. That Act amended many education statutes and in particular amended several of the statutes regarding the formation and governance of union school districts. One possible explanation as to why designation was limited to independent high schools is that it was intended to support the few remaining academies in an era when the formation of union school districts was being encouraged by the state. Being able to designate public schools might dissuade districts from forming union districts.

The specific charge from the general assembly follows.

Act 154, Section 36 of 2008

* * Designation of a Public or Elementary School; Study * * *

Sec. 36. DESIGNATION OF A PUBLIC OR ELEMENTARY SCHOOL AS THE PUBLIC SCHOOL OF A DISTRICT; STUDY

The general assembly recognizes that, notwithstanding the limitations of 16 V.S.A. § 827, it may at times be necessary or advisable to authorize Vermont school districts to designate a public or approved independent elementary or secondary school as the public school of the designating school district. On or before January 15, 2009, the commissioner shall examine the issue and provide the senate and house committees on education with detailed information that will enable the general assembly to determine whether expanded authorization should be available to all school districts that do not maintain a school, whether authorization exceeding § 827 should never be granted, or whether expanded authorization should be limited to specific situations. The detailed information shall include data regarding school districts that provide for the education of their students by paying tuition, the number of students in these districts, the schools the students are able to attend under current law, and the schools they might reasonably attend if districts could designate a public or approved independent elementary school, a public secondary school, or both as the public school or schools of the district.

Information

The information requested is presented in a summary and four tables. A brief description of each table follows.

1. Districts offering parental choice for the grade levels
2. Districts offering parental choice to public schools
3. Districts that have designated schools for the grade level. Note that § 823 refers to elementary tuition and § 824 refers to high school tuition. Neither explicitly applies to secondary grades 7 and 8. Practice seems to be that districts designating schools and tuitioning 7th- and 8th-graders treat them as designated when the designating school offers grades 7 and 8. Some districts that designate schools have a policy of paying tuition up to the amount paid to the designated school to a public or approved independent school of the parent’s choice.
4. Districts operating schools or belonging to unions. In these circumstances a school board may agree to pay tuition to another district or school if the board believes the action is in the best interest of the student.

Questions and Comments

Department staff believe considering the following comments and questions would be helpful to this discussion.

Designating public high schools

Following legislative action, the impact of an agreement where a district currently offering parental choice designates a public high school is reasonably clear. The school board of the designating district would be required to pay the tuition to the designated public high school. The board would not be required to pay tuition to any other district or school preferred by a student or parents. The legal right to parental choice is removed.

There are a large number of questions surrounding the designation of a Vermont public high school by a district currently offering parental choice:

Why would a district offering parental choice choose to designate a public school?

If a district is tuitioning students to several public schools, the school board could designate the least expensive. The board could then require students to attend the designated public school or offer to pay up to that amount to other public or approved independent schools.

A district could believe that negotiations over designation could get its students preferred treatment over tuitioning districts or could give the designating district a voice in educational decisions made by the designated district. A designating district may also believe it could negotiate a preferred tuition rate. Preferred rates are not likely because districts must offer the same rates to all sending districts (16 VSA § 824(b)).

A school board could have concerns that one of the districts or independent schools chosen by parents was providing less than adequate education for its students.

Why would a receiving district sign an agreement allowing another district to designate its high school?

The primary reason we can think of why a district would allow its high school to be designated would be to increase stability in enrollment. A more stable enrollment would facilitate budgeting and could achieve improved efficiency. Improved stability of enrollment is likely to require the designating district to guarantee to send students to the designated school except when the designated school is unable to meet the needs of a student.

Other questions

Would a public school allowing another district to designate it be required to accept all students from the designating district?

Would a public school district agreeing to accept designation be required to accept designation from other districts?

What impact would the existence of designating districts have on students from tuitioning districts? If capacity is limited will students from designating districts receive preference over students from tuitioning districts?

Will tuition paid by designating districts be subject to negotiation? Will the amount be adjusted when the Allowable Tuition Rate is calculated?

Designating Public or Independent Grade Schools

The questions above would apply to designation of grade schools as well. The case of grade school designation is further compounded by a difference in statute between provisions for high school and grade school tuition.

§ 822 School districts to maintain high schools or pay tuition (a) (1) reads:

The electorate authorizes the school board to close an existing high school and to provide for the high school education of its pupils by paying tuition in accordance with law. Tuition for its pupils shall be paid to an approved public or independent high school, to be selected by the parents or guardians of the pupil, within or without the state; {emphasis added}

§ 821 School district to maintain public elementary schools or pay tuition (a) (1) reads:

The electorate authorizes the school board to provide for the elementary education of the pupils residing in the district by paying tuition in accordance with law to public elementary schools in one or more school districts. {Note that § 823 (b) makes reference to elementary tuition payments to independent schools.}

By omitting the “to be selected by the parents” language, statute already seems to give considerable authority to school boards to determine the elementary schools attended by residents. We believe that the practice of most districts amounts to parental choice.

Miscellaneous notes

The ability of sending and receiving districts to negotiate tuition provisions that supersede the Allowable Tuition calculation have already provided some of the flexibility that permitting designation of public schools would provide for elementary and secondary schools.
